

Homeschooling: pros and cons

At the age of seven years every child first goes to school. But there are exceptions when parents realize that their child cannot go to school. The reasons for this may be different. In such cases the solution is home schooling.

To parents then a lot of questions, for example, on the equipment of the classroom for a child or how to approach the learning process.

Before you decide on such a bold step, it is important to weigh all the advantages and disadvantages of home education.

One of the advantages can be identified:

- + homeschooling allows you to choose an approach that is tailored to the individual child;
- + the teacher will only deal with one child that will give more fruitful results;
- + is reduced to zero, the occurrence of stressful situations typical of school;
- + education at home will allow you to develop all the skills of the child;
- + the child will be able to choose a profession for everyone;
- + the child will learn how to find information;

In addition to the positive aspects that home schooling has a negative:

– the child will not be suited to fight with difficulties, if the parents are around to help;

– circle of friends of the child, the child at home usually is limited, to make new friends it can be easy;

– when a child goes to the Institute to communicate with his peers he did not avoid, and why? But if experience it will be very small, it will become a closed person;

– home schooling can cause of poor child development.

If it is decided that a child will learn at home, the first thing you need to find good teachers. To the selection of teachers should be taken seriously. The teacher should be not only professional, but also have positive personal qualities. In the case where intuition does not allow you to leave the child with a specific teacher for a day, it should be replaced by another.

Being home schooled, the child will have to perform their own homework, and parents need to control this process. Because the duties of a teacher includes only the submission and explanation of material as well as the results of the task. To help your child in learning the material, maybe one of the parents, if he knows one of the subjects children study. In this case, you first need to study the curriculum.

When a child learns at home, he feels free. While in school, children have to observe some rules. For a successful education at home you write my essay login must allocate the child's classroom. The classroom needs to be equipped with the following items:

1. Table and chair;
2. Board;
3. The place of the teacher;

Between the lessons needs to be changes, like in school. And also do not forget about the exams and tests that are required for certification of the child.

If there is no serious reason to leave a child home schooled, he is healthy and active, like communication with peers. Best to send their children to school. If the child is still studying at home parents need to arrange it in the mug. Mugs need to be selected according to the interests of the child where he can find friends and just to communicate with peers.
