Stuff We Like: Wool and the Gang Slip Knot Ties

Upon walking into the "Above Tree Line" area (it was the spot with the kegs and wood chips) at (capsule) show earlier this month, it was hard to ignore the colorful, hand-knit letters suspended over the floor. They were the handiwork of SoHo knitwear label Wool and the Gang, and they're encouraging everyone to take up the skill reserved mainly for rocking chair residents, and professionals. Besides teaching classes, selling knitting kits, and just generally being some wonderful people, WATG also hawks their own collection, and one of the standouts is their Slip Knot Tie. At first glance the gorgeous Peruvian wool looks chunky, but it's super lightweight, and transitional enough to be your daily vine. Personally, I'm going to wear mine to fashion shows and tell everyone my grandmother made it, because that's just next level geek chic.

$110, available at Wool and the Gang.
