

CAMRA's advice on being a responsible pub goer in England

Now that pubs have reopened, we're all enjoying getting back to our locals, having a pint and enjoying the social aspects of pub going.

Things look and feel a little different to before. That's why we've put together our advice on how you can use pubs safely and responsibly.

Who you can go to the pub with:

- In a group of up to six people from different households, indoors or out, unless you live in an area where local restrictions mean that households cannot mix.

Be a responsible pub goer by:

- Listening to the staff and following instructions on signs
- Waiting patiently in queues
- Washing your hands or using hand sanitising stations regularly
- Staying in your allocated seating area as much as possible
- Using contactless payments if requested
- Considering ordering remotely (e.g. through an app or website) where this option is provided

A few do's and don'ts

- Do go back to the pub where you can – pubs are safe, regulated places to socialise if you follow the rules
- Do give your contact details to help with Track and Trace
- Don't come to the pub if you, or someone in your household or support bubble has symptoms of COVID-19 – stay at home and follow NHS advice
- Don't risk getting your local into trouble with the authorities by breaching rules – many of them are now legal requirements

Please note that this advice is correct at the time of issue but does not take into account where local lockdown restrictions are in place which prevent pubs opening for on sales, or restrict separate households from socialising in any circumstances.
