How to complete a Score Sheet or Score Pad at the Club

On the Boss

Standard Target Faces which are made in different sizes are generally of five colours: gold, red, blue, black and white.

Each coloured circle is divided by a central line, this format is used by both G.N.A.S. and F.I.T.A. Depending on the type of round being shot the colours can have different scoring values. GNAS rounds scoring each colour a different score and FITA each band, however the same face is used. For our own Wyke Archers Rounds we use the FITA scoring system of 1 to 10 numbered bands.

On the Score Sheet

Most score sheets follow a similar format; however, despite the differences in design, scoring always follows the same pattern. An example of a score sheet and how to use it are shown below. The example is of a score sheet suitable for a single distance round, e.g. a Portsmouth (5 dozen arrows at 20 yards).

Arrows are shot in ends of six usually. Once all archers shooting have shot their end, the arrows are scored. No-one should touch any arrows on the boss until all arrows have been recorded. Each archer should point and call out each score for their arrows in batches of 3 (from highest to lowest) to the nominated recorder and only when all scores from all archers have been recorded and verified can the arrows be removed from the boss. The archers score for the first six arrows would be entered – left to right – highest to lowest on the score sheet. The next six arrows from the following end would also be entered on the right of the first line using the same criteria, so each line records the score for one dozen arrows. The score for the dozen would then be totalled. This would continue until all rounds are shot, after which a grand total is calculated and the recorders initials should be also included as verification that the scores are honest and correct.
